Cyber Security - What Directors Need to know

13 July 2023, Thursday (09.30am - 12.30pm)

Cyber-attacks and data leakage are a daily threats to organisations, reminding us that we are all potential targets of this type of threat. Lawyers are discussing the potential risk of individual liability for corporate directors who do not take appropriate responsibility for oversight of cyber security. Security breaches must be a priority in board members' minds.

Cybercriminals are an organized industry. High-profile breaches at well-known and respected government institutions and companies are becoming almost common and are highly damaging. Beyond the theft of customer information, cybercriminals are creating legal issues, inciting fraud, and making-off with intellectual property. And with the rise of social media, news of a breach can be difficult to contain. It carries inevitable damage to a company and its reputation
